The award “honors individuals 39 or younger whose commitment, hard work and achievements have enhanced their credit union or the entire New York credit union movement,” according to the NYCUA. Mr. Sellwood will receive the award at EXCEL 19, the NYCUA’s annual meeting and convention, in June.

“We are incredibly proud of Richard and his efforts on behalf of Reliant, our members, and the entire credit union movement,” said Pamela Heald, President & CEO of Reliant. “Richard has always been a strong advocate for credit unions and for educating and developing other emerging leaders in the movement, and so this is such a fitting honor.”
